Walking and Outdoor Festival Disclaimer

Although each event has been researched with a view to minimising the risks to participants who follow its route, no event can be considered to be completely free of risk. Activities in the outdoors will always require a degree of common sense and judgement.

Each individual is responsible for their own safety as well as that of others in the group. Be aware of changes in the weather and check the forecast before you set out. Participants should ensure they have suitable footwear, clothing and equipment for the activity and the weather conditions as well as the terrain and that they carry water with them if needed.

Outdoor activities can be demanding and it is the responsibility of each individual to ensure they are fit enough to take part before joining any event. If there are any doubts the participant should consult a doctor and if you have a medical condition please make sure someone within the group knows about it.
